

MIA scholarship supports summer forages research

PhD student Holly Phillips, a recipient of a Meat Industry Association scholarship, is excited about the potential of her research - investigating alternative finishing diets to ryegrass/white clover.

Thanks to an MIA post-graduate scholarship, Holly is combining her studies with work as a forage agronomist for PGG Wrightson.

“There is a huge amount of potential in New Zealand to increase productivity of lambs finished on summer forage crops, particularly in those areas that experience summer dry conditions.”
